THE GARDENING HABIT.

In the spring the rural fancy Lightly turns to gardening, And the tyro at the business Thinks that it is just the thing. Spade and hoe and rake he's buying, For such things he mustn't lack; Then the yard of small dimensions

He is ripping up the back. Old tin cans and glass and brickbata, Cobblestones and ancient shoes He unearths while he is spading Plot of ground he means to use. Till at last the digging's done, And in seeds he's then investing

For the garden just begun. There's a little bed for lettuce. In another peas he'll chuck; There are beds for beans and onlons, Beets and other garden truck. Then, when all the seeds are planted,

He stands back and points with pride To the garden that all summer Will for table well provide. Who so proudly calculated

On the products of his toil, for the neighbor's hungry chickens. Play the dickens with the seeds, And the beds so nicely plotted Soon display a crop of weeds. There's another week of toiling In attempts to make it pay; Then the man who dug the garden
